Benjamin Franklin (1706-1790) is one of the Founding Fathers of the United States.

He spent much of his time in London away from Philadelphia. While in London, he sent letters to many luminaries in various fields including family members and friends.

He was still in contact with many people in the U.S. who resides in Philadelphia, Boston, and Burlington. He most frequently sent letters to Deborah, although never returned home until she died.

This network presents a social network in 17th century France, and our story is about Marie Boucher, a famous commercant from Nantes.

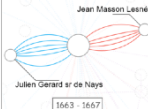

Nodes in this network represent friends, family, and business partners of Marie Boucher.

In 1660, Marie started to exchanged letters about jobs and commercial opportunities.

Two of her contacts became important as she exchanged several letters with them.

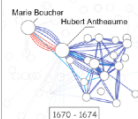

Soon, she started creating financial ties to lend money for trade expeditons into Africa and America.

In 1671, she got into regular contact with Hubert Antheaume, her close colleague and friend over the coming years.

Hubert asked his family for support for Marie.

With Hubert's help, Marie's business expanded quickly in Nantes, and had influence over Amsterdam and the Caribbeean.

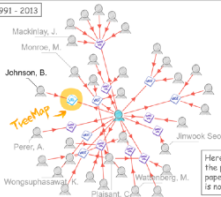

Ben Shneiderman (1947-) is one of the founding fathers of visualization and HCI.

There is my favorite one. The semantic substrates paper!

2007 - 2013

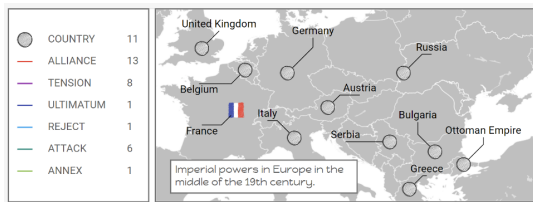

His authorship network was still growing! Who would have thought he was going to retire last year.

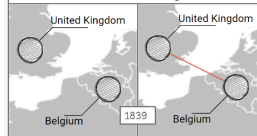

Pleasant, C.

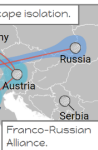

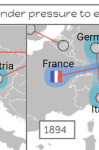

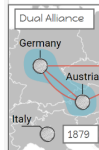

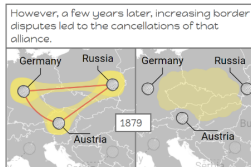

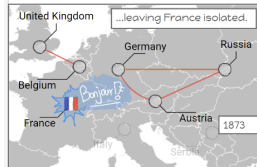

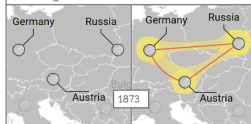

Among many collaborators, he worked with "Catherine Pleasant" the most! What a good professional relationship we should admire!
